

Dillard University and Texas Chiropractic College in Pasadena, Texas recently entered into a 3+3 articulation agreement. Student participants will complete three years of coursework at Dillard, followed immediately by three years at TCC. Those who complete the combined curriculum will hold a bachelor of science degree from Dillard and a doctor of chiropractic degree from TCC.

"We are very excited to launch this partnership with our new friends at Dillard University," said Dr. Clay McDonald, TCC provost. "One of the shared goals of our schools is to assist our students in achieving their educational goals as quickly and economically as possible, and this agreement will help us further that cause. This is a great benefit to the institutions, but more importantly, to our students."
