Dillard Choir performs at the White House

When the Dillard Choir, the oldest African American choir in the South, performed at the White House on January 27, 2012, they were joined by the President and First Lady. The choir, which has been performing for over 100 years, was led by Dr. Kinnear. The performance was a highlight of the evening, and the choir received a standing ovation from the President and First Lady. The choir's performance was a testament to the rich musical heritage of the African American community in the South.
